

Customized Training and Development

Lean implementation approaches vary depending on the organization itself and the business conditions in which they find themselves. For example, Five S in a food processing organization looks very different than in a machine shop. Efficient work layout is very different in a hospital than it is in an auto parts manufacturer. Unstable conditions may require rapid improvement, while other scenarios call for a different approach.

Some things work in certain cases and some don't, making every next step even more critical.

All of these variables require experience in a wide range of industries and in varying business conditions. They also require the insight it takes to design and deliver an efficient and effective customized training and development program. Beyond our vast experience in many industries, what differentiates the Lean Learning Center is our one single mission – “We will transfer our skills and knowledge to you and work ourselves toward disengagement.”
